The Markets of the World.

Here is another unshotted gun called "the markets of the world." The markets of the world! How broad and cold these words are. They stretch from the frozen regions of the northern pole, across the blazing tropics, to the ice-bound shores of the Antarctic continent.

All this we can have if we will but give up the little hand's breadth called the United States of America. What are these markets of the world? To hear these rhetoricians declaim, you would imagine the markets of the world a vast vacuum, waiting all now for American goods to break through, rush in and fill the yearning void. Will your goods go to Australia, to Italy, Germany, Russia or France? Around all these benighted countries are the "Chinese" walls of tariff taxes. British herself is protected by vast capital accumulated through the spoils of her own and other lands, by a trade system as powerful as it is relentless. All these nations will coexist with you the other countries which they already overflow.

Does your mouth water over the prospect? What market do you give up for all this? Where is the best market in the world? Where the people have the most money to spend. Where have the people the most money to spend? Right here in the United States of America, after twenty-seven years of protectionist rule. And you are asked to give up such a market for the markets of the world! Why, the history of such a transaction was told twenty-four hundred years ago. It is a classic. You will find it in the works of Aesop, the fabulist.

Once there was a dog. He was a nice little dog. Nothing the matter with him except a few foolish freetide ideas in his head. He was trotting along happily as the day for he had in his mouth a nice shoulder of succulent mutton. By and by he came to a stream bridged by a plank. He trotted along and looking over the side of the plank, he saw the markets of the world and dived for them. A minute after he was crawling up the bank, the weakest, the sickest [great laughter], the waviest, the most unfortunest dog that ever swam about! [Great laughter and applause.]—Speech of Hon. Thomas B. Reed of Maine, in House of Representatives, May 19, 1888.
